Author: lewishopper Subject: Abandoning humanity/focus Object: fear of being alone without a partner... and of being dead without not being alone. "Somewhere in my past, I lost my sense of connection with my fellow-beings and with my fellow-souls. I am alone, and it is more my fear than my reality. One by one, the people I loved and trusted have abandoned me. I am too wretched to be human, and I am too human to be happy. I am afraid of being dead without having had the chance to meet my beloved, to hold her. I am afraid of being alone in eternity, for I would not have enjoyed the moments I have lived." "For us to be honest, we'd be lying if we said we were not a little bit concerned about how the Obama administration might be dealing with the Russians," added another House Armed Services Committee member, Republican Duncan Hunter of California.

WASHINGTON — U.S. lawmakers expressed concern over Russia's meddling in U.S. elections on Wednesday and suggested it could include interference in the midterm elections this year, as President Barack Obama faces a decision whether to order an unprecedented retaliation. The U.S. intelligence community has concluded Russia deliberately interfered in the 2016 presidential election, with an eye toward helping Republican Donald Trump defeat Democrat Hillary Clinton. The White House last week announced new sanctions on Moscow, and the Russia issue will be a top item at the Group of 20 meeting of world leaders in Germany this week. Obama has resisted calls for military action against Russia, which has denied the hacking allegations. But some members of Congress, Democrats and Republicans alike, said they are worried about being caught unprepared should the situation change. "The best way to prepare for this is to prepare for every other scenario out there, including a cyberattack," said House Speaker Paul Ryan, R-Wis. Rep. Adam Kinzinger, R-Ill., said he would like to see a greater sense of urgency in the administration to assess the national security risks. "I'm incredibly worried about it. The breadth of the attacks, the number of systems compromised ... the quantity of information [that] is at risk," Kinzinger told reporters. So far, the Obama administration has taken a wait-and-see approach to Russian interference, calling the allegations serious without directly blaming Moscow.

Evidence for an activating role of B7-2 on human monocytes. The interaction of B7-2 with its receptor counteracts the inhibitory effect of CTLA4 (CD152) on T lymphocyte activation. The involvement of B7-2 in the regulation of inflammatory responses is unclear and controversial. B7-2 was shown to negatively regulate IL-2 and IFN-gamma release from CD4(+) T lymphocytes. To analyze the effect of B7-2 on monocyte function, we studied the interaction between B7-2 and CD28/B7 receptors on monocytes. We used flow cytometry and antibodies that recognize B7-1, B7-2, and CD28 molecules to analyze this interaction. We found that human monocytes constitutively expressed the CD28/B7 receptor, which was up-regulated by exposure to IFN-gamma. In contrast, B7-2 but not B7-1 was constitutively expressed on human monocytes. Flow cytometry analysis showed that B7-2 and its receptor were colocalized on the cell surface. When monocytes were cultured in the presence of phorbol 12-myristate 13-acetate, significant increases in B7-2 surface expression were observed. An increased cell-surface expression of B7-2 was also observed in monocytes exposed to IFN-gamma. The expression of B7-2 induced by IFN-gamma was inhibited by the protein kinase C inhibitor H7. These results provide evidence for the constitutive expression of B7-2 on human monocytes, and for an inhibitory role of B7-2 in T lymphocyte activation.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to circuitry and methods for detecting differences in two reference voltages, and more specifically to circuitry and methods for detecting a difference between two reference voltages that both lie between the same supply voltage.

2. Description of the Related Art Many electronic circuit applications use a stable reference voltage in order to operate logic circuits within a system. For example, a differential amplifier or a comparator may require a reference voltage to operate correctly. Also, a voltage reference circuit can provide a stable reference voltage to track a changing input signal, or to provide a clean reference for driving other circuits. A problem associated with reference voltage circuits is that manufacturing variations in circuit components and conditions during manufacturing or use may result in circuit performance (e.g., gain
