Add glitters to you videos and images and see how you can edit your own awesome glitteries! A: I'm quite happy with Vellum Gold (GNU/Linux, too), and it's an easily expandable set of instruments (followable installation, online manual, online community, paid full version is quite cool). I've been using it for a long time, and it's a great way to use your images! I'm thinking about buying the OST too... This is music for our imaginations. A: There's Glitter Nova, which is a freeware, and makes creating your own glossies from various tools and formats a complete point-n-click process. It can import from a number of sources including a number of flash video sites (including YouTube), and also supports a variety of image editing tools (including Gimp, Photoshop, and GimpShop). I have a number of videos with many different glossies in them, and it took me less than a minute to prepare them all. You can certainly get the feeling of 'getting your hands dirty' with it, as you're presented with plenty of control points, but it's a very intuitive program to use, and most of the time you can simply click and drag to prepare your image without having to worry about setting up any complex layers or screens. A great tool to use for anyone who's ever wanted to create their own flash video glossies. Q: -Net Core 3.0 Identity password hashing - a good implementation? A few years ago I implemented some simple password hashing and authentication for my .Net application by using MD5 and SHA1. I was using and recommend WinCrypt.Pwdgen.exe, this was for a Windows Service. Then
