Q: When to create subdomain server, why does a lack of certificate generate a browser error? I want to change my server to work with multiples subdomains. I would like to know what's the best way to do. My first idea was to create a second domain (e.g. host1.com), but it appeared that I couldn't send an email with the second domain. I then tried to point the domain the current domain pointing to our server (but it appears that I couldn't send an email using this domain either), and I found out that it was because I didn't have a certificate. I have found articles telling that I could just point the domain to the same server while creating a subdomain, but I don't get why it gives me this error: * certificate verify failed ****

A: You need to buy a public certification (certificate), which if it was issued for a new domain name, allows an email server to send emails only with new domains. Without the certificate, a mail server would not be able to send email on behalf of a new domain name.
