Features Key:

2nd Emulator: PPSPPP
Tekken Tag Tournament 2
AirMech

1. AirMech only. AirMech Game can only be played in psspp emulator

2. The AirMech Sound Track is for pjs2 arista emulator. Tekken Tag Tournament 2 and AirMech are the Original Game through the franchise. However I believe the songs are original but the Music works in pjs2 arista. The ppsp Emulator does not feature the air mech theme in and i cannot see them there either so if it doesnt play for you on that emulator then there will be a problem.

3. The air mech sound track does not play in all the game modes

4. The Controller will not be affected with the PC copy base controller in playlist mode. For example if you play Son of Norimejima in Slot 1 controller A and you play it again in Slot 4 controller 1(control type) then the A buton will shoot, A+Okain will unlock the door, A+Yunina can float but the Slots do not affect (e.g. if A+Yunina was in slot 1 mode and you put it in slot 4 controller 1 mode the A button is still A that will do

Serious Sam HD: The First Encounter is a nostalgic shooter that brings back the action of the "Serious Sam" series that fans of the series will enjoy. All original music from the game is also included with the CD-Audio soundtrack. The game supports Steam Achievements and Leaderboards. The game's official soundtrack, available as a CD, is composed by Alex Høgh Andersen of the Danish group Dissonant Productions. About Serious Sam: Serious Sam is a first-person, cover-based shooter franchise, centered on the character of Sam "Serious" Stone. It was created by Croteam and it is published by Flying Wild Hog and developed by 3D Realms. To date, there have been four games (two for PC and two for consoles) in the series. The first game, Serious Sam, was released in 2001. It received generally positive reviews. Although the sequel, Serious Sam 2, was met with less favorable reviews, it still sold well, and the franchise grew in popularity. About Flying Wild Hog: Flying Wild Hog was founded in 2004 with the sole purpose of creating a new studio in which to develop the game Serious Sam: The First Encounter, the sequel to the critically acclaimed Serious Sam. The studio is based in Borger, Texas, just outside of Austin. Founded by the Croteam founders Jakob Pors and Jani, the new studio's other founders are Matt Sandell, Henrik Larsson, and Christian Sibylle. Two years after the studio's founding, the Flying Wild Hog team won "Studio of the Year" award at the 2004 Independent Game Festival. About 3D Realms: 3D Realms is an independent video game developer founded by Jensen Daggett and Scott Miller in 1996. The company was established to bring their vision of gaming as an art form to life: their games would be scripted, created with all of their development, and distributed on CDs or DVDs. While they have had much of their work distributed in gaming magazines like Game Informer and GameSpot, 3D Realms had only one commercial release at the time of their launch: the critically acclaimed Duke Nukem 3D. After reaching a new, much larger audience for 3D Realms with Serious Sam, the studio used the experience to form a new plan and in 2004, signed a deal with Nordic Games, owners of the Dark Forces series. In addition to being a publishing partner c9d1549cdd

is a collection of micro-games designed to bring together your soda-drinking collection and your cocktail-hoarding collection. The conceptual art of Edgar Degas and Daniel Day Lewis is featured in curator Philip Moersch's quirky journey through the history and culture of sodas, along with his unique flair for re-contextualizing brands and experiences. Curator Philip Moersch has previously curated exhibitions for the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art (SFMOMA) and the MIT List Visual Arts Center; he has been featured in the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, San Francisco Magazine, the Chicago Reader, and USA Today. "What sorcery has caused these delightful sensations?" asked The Proprietor. "That is a very good question, Mr. Tower. Here," said The Proprietor, reaching into his vault of soda pop. From his vast cabinet arose a rather childish-looking bottle that looked to be made out of some delicate porcelain or glass, its intricate decoration including many colors and design elements. "What I shall call 'Soda Bottle Purplish,' from the legendary Queen Anne period. This bottle has the design and colors of bottles produced as part of the Baltimore Cellar of 1798, as well as a date and the signature 'R.H.' engraved on it. This bottle was included in the famous exhibition Souvenir de Genève ('Switzerland's Champagne'), on which the cover illustration also depicts the bottle. But I have had to press wine into the service of Champagne." Other bottles, newly acquired by the Museum, included a design that dates to the turn of the twentieth century and extends from San Francisco's famed Depression Glass period, often said to end in 1933, to the post-war glass designs that are often associated with the mania for mother-of-pearl, including a very stylized bottle that resembles the shape of a whale. There was also one that bore the imprint of the Chicago Cellar, opening in 1821. "Look at all the colors and patterns!" said The Proprietor, gesturing over the cluster of tiny intricacies and colors. "And look what it says on the back—how classically senescent! It's at least eighty-five years old! Look, Red Rover, we have you at last
