Thousand Home Welcome Thousand was initially released as a flagship project of the Verdoia centre of excellence - the CERi. Thousand is a European Commission-funded project which focuses on the product ingredients in food. The aim is to facilitate and promote research on the impact of industrial food-processing, packaging, storage and transport, as well as the role of kitchen and consumer behaviours. The project has been running since January 2015 and is held by the Art of Life lab (Trasilienabio.it). The partners include: UCBM, University of Torino - Italy Cambridge University - UK Institute of Formulation - Netherlands Food Flow Centre - Sweden Centro Altimetre - Italy The Lab has already published the following papers related to the project: New Zealand geckos, known for their venomous bites, are immune to the effects of strychnine - which may help explain the lack of toxicity in people who commit suicide by slitting their own throats. The finding solves part of the puzzle behind why people who consume strychnine - a poison derived from the seeds of the strychnine tree - often die from symptoms of a heart attack rather than from that effect. The key to this serendipitous discovery lies in a
