Biological variability and sex differences in rat V(1) cardiac muscle action potentials. The human electrocardiogram has been measured more frequently in the clinical setting. Although sex differences in the normal human electrocardiogram exist, these have not been specifically investigated in laboratory animals, where methods to make precise determinations of changes in QT and repolarization are easier. The blood supply to the heart is derived by a blood-brain-spine circuit. Cardiac mass is determined by the heart rate and action potential duration (APD). The average APD is longer in males than in females during sexual activity. This study examined the effect of gender on cardiac action potentials in the rat. Primary cardiomyocytes were isolated from 8-week-old Sprague Dawley rats and separated into female and male cell populations. Single cell APD was measured using the patch-clamp technique. Voltage clamp protocols were designed to determine the effects of phosphodiesterase (PDE) inhibition on potassium currents. Membrane capacitance and action potential area did not differ between genders. Male cells had a significantly longer APD90 compared with female cells (490 +/- 13 vs 426 +/- 9 ms, p This invention relates to a sprayer and more particularly to one which has a valve-actuated valve plate to facilitate the shutting off of the flow of the liquid from the outlet of the nozzle. The use of a valve-actuated valve plate is known in such sprayers. A typical prior art sprayer is shown in FIG. 4 wherein a valve plate 2 is spring-biased to close a discharge passage 1 of a valve body 3. A nozzle tube 4 is secured to the discharge passage 1 0cc13bf012

I want to do the following: Get the data in cells from time t=0 to t=T; Plot the data in such a way that I will have the data in cells of time t in 3D. The problem is that I could not find a way to do it so that I would have a 3D plot without overlapping of the cells. Can you give me some hint? A: Convert your matrix of points into a 3D matrix with 3 dimensions (pts(1,:,:)'). Now, using an indexing, define a colorbar that defines a color by the sequence where you put your values. Using MATLAB's plot function, you get the 3D view with the points in the color you defined. Q: Printf not putting printed text on the screen In Xcode I have a number of variables that I want to print to the screen, but they don't seem to work. I have tried using 'printf' and 'print'. I have a file with functions declared in it and one of the functions is void print_a_float(float a){ printf("%g ",a); printf("%f ",a); printf("%f ",a); }
