Transthoracic needle biopsy in children. A retrospective review of 393 consecutive transthoracic needle biopsies (TNB) in infants and children was carried out. The average age was 6.7 years and ranged from 4 months to 18 years. In the majority (67.6%) the procedure was carried out under general anaesthesia, and a local anaesthetic was administered in 12.9%. Local anaesthetic failure occurred in 10.1% of the cases. Complications included pneumothorax in 2.5% and anaesthesia in 0.9%. Positive biopsy was obtained in 97.1% of cases. There were two fatalities and these may have been avoidable. When carried out with the experience that we have gained, the overall results, morbidity and mortality appear to be acceptable. This EPLAN Patch was started in January 2012.Early effect of weightlessness on transmission of information to the vestibulo-ocular system. The hypothesis of transmission of information through the otolith organs to the central nervous system was tested by measuring vestibuloocular reflex (VOR) gain in response to linear horizontal acceleration. It was found that early after spaceflight of 12 days, a decreasing trend of gain was observed. The threshold of this
