As we approach the launch of the new fantasy action RPG, , we've been hard at work releasing the game's three game modes, and during this period we've been keeping a careful eye on the reviews that have been posted on each country's site. The results have been quite interesting, so we've compiled the top ten, sorted by review website, to share with you. Top 10 Reviews of Japan The popular arcade game, The King of Fighters '98, was the official game for the console release of and it was quite the hit. Over a million people participated in the game's online tournament, making it the largest tournament for a video game in Japan at the time. And it kept the momentum going even after the game was released. KOTOR This popular FPS game has won over an immense number of fans. In fact, we've had to clarify that the official name of the game is not KOTOR but rather SPACE BATTLE RPG . Huge sales of the Space Battles RPG KOTOR was made to be an RPG with as many RPG elements as possible, and it stands out in that regard. What's more, its RPG elements were designed with the player in mind, and the system of assigning a value to equipment has been proven to increase interest in the game. THE KING OF FIGHTERS 2002 It's been a long time since the release of KOF '98, but the new generation of fighting game players was certainly impressed with the superb gameplay and competitive edge of KOF 2002. THE KING OF FIGHTERS Everyone who played the remake of KOF '98 and the sequel KOF '98 Perfect Battle can say that KOF is still a fantastic fighting game that has not been touched by time. SOU The new game is a popular shooting game on the Japanese PC. There were no official titles released at the time, but the game sold about 1.5 million copies, making it the title most popular on the Japanese PC. THE KING OF FIGHTERS 2004 Everyone who has played any of the games knows that the series has a great fighting game system. News FAI, Michael O'Neill meet to discuss new World Cup qualification format

Former FAI technical director Michael O'Neill says a meeting between the two groups will take place next week to discuss the new 2014 World Cup qualification format. The 24 teams in O'Neill's group will meet in Boston for their 'group of death' opening fixture at the Avaya Stadium on Friday night, while his 10 colleagues will meet in Cork five days later. The FAI confirmed talks are expected between the groups at a Dublin hotel on Friday. "We'll hold a meeting next week," said O'Neill. "We've got two representatives on each side and we'll see how we go. We need to have a look at the format of a new World Cup qualifying format and if we agree it then we'll push it down to the clubs." The O'Neill's group will travel by train and car to the Avaya Stadium on Friday evening and will have to battle to be among the 16 teams who qualify for the play-offs in the Netherlands on June 11. In comparison, the 10 countries that O'Neill's team will meet on June 21 in the ICC were drawn into the same group at the last World Cup in South Africa, when the leading 10 nations were grouped in South Africa. "It makes a lot of sense," said the Northern Ireland captain. "It's a group of death and there is some fairness in that." O'Neill
