The interaction of mono- and polynucleotides with molybdenum sulfate in solution has been investigated by both ultraviolet (UV) absorbance spectroscopy and circular dichroism (CD). Evidence for the formation of a 1:1:1 (M:MO:OH) complex in acidic and neutral conditions has been obtained. Free OH groups in the complex are involved in a reaction with nucleotide molecules leading to structural modification which can be characterized by the alteration in the UV absorbance and CD spectra of nucleotides. The reaction is dependent on pH and only in aqueous solutions at pH 2.0 where the OH groups of both M and OH exist and the reaction is initiated. The interactions between M and nucleotides in aqueous solutions proceed with similar kinetics. The interaction of nucleotides with MO is similar to that of M but the rate of reaction is lower. The role of the OH group of M is also discussed.Q: Adding text to Google Calendar event

Q: How to take snapshot of an URL in android device I have an app that has a part where it takes a snapshot of the url. It opens a browser and the url is linked to an image that it opens. The problem i'm having is that I want to make it so a user can take a snapshot of a url they are viewing before the browser closes automatically and upload to my website. I can take the snapshot using this code Bitmap bmp =Bitmap.createScaledBitmap(Bitmap.createBitmap(img), 250, 225, Bitmap.Scale_Insets_Fade(new float[] {0,0,0,0}), false); However this code only works when you have an img and not a url. So is there a way to get a url and make it so that it looks like the img? I'm asking this because I'm just wondering if there is a way to take a snapshot of a url, not necessarily an image.
