The development of high-performance electrode materials is of paramount importance for improving energy efficiency and extending cycle life of Li-ion batteries (LIBs). Here, a facile and efficient strategy is reported to fabricate Niobium (Nb)-Nickel oxide (NiO) nanosheets with ultrahigh specific surface area and excellent electric conductivity, which endows the Nb-NiO nanosheets with superior Li-ion storage properties. Upon the three-dimensional (3D) assembly of the as-prepared Nb-NiO nanosheets on metal (Ni, Cu, and Fe) substrates, the resulting heterostructured electrodes deliver a remarkably high discharge capacity of about 420 mA h g⁻¹ after 200 cycles, which are further calculated to be 3.8- and 3.5-times that of bare Ni and Nb nanosheets, respectively. Moreover, the discharge capacity of the heterostructured electrode can be enhanced by electrolyte modification. Such a heterostructured electrode has the potential to enhance the performance and lifetime of LIBs. { // skip empty log messages } else { if !isValid(v) { // if the value is not valid, log it logrus.Errorf("%s is not valid, it must be valid and contain the node version. Shackles B.C.'s Minister of Family Resources and Children's Services, Jordan Sturdy, is calling for a moratorium on new shackling cases because, he says, jails and detention facilities have inappropriate means to address a serious problem. In an open letter to Attorney General Wally Oppal and Minister of Justice Kevin Falcon, Sturdy wrote that although the province's correctional system has a rigorous oversight and training process, cases of physical restraint or restraint-related injury continue to occur. Among his suggestions, Sturdy writes that the province should examine whether the use of physical restraint is necessary to prevent someone who is so mentally ill that they are a danger to themselves or others from hurting themselves or others and whether people in custody receive appropriate mental health treatment. "

Fs-Commander is a comprehensive flight simulator which adds functionality in all areas of the flight simulator World: Assertive controlling of aircraft motion: command of an aircraft's speed/altitude/heading using any of various cues such as the primary flight display, the information from an autopilot, or for a more in-depth control, the system provides high fidelity simulation of pilot inputs such as the rudder pedal and throttle. This allows you to better control complex aircraft maneuvers and make the most of your flying skills.

Automatic handling of climbing and descending, directional navigation, formation flying, and instrument flying are also included. From that, I will add that it is the most rewarding aircraft package for the novice pilot. This is a just another frikking addon with no options more than a scenery.
