Monitoring of 24-hour and first-void urine NaCl excretion in 87 subjects: a multicenter study in Turkey. A sample of 87 subjects (44 men and 43 women) were studied for the monitoring of 24-hour and first-void urine NaCl excretion. The subjects were in- and outpatients of Gazi University Medical School Hospital, Institute of Respiratory Diseases Hospital of Ankara University, and the Ege University Medical School Hospital. All subjects had no history of upper tract abnormalities, kidney disease, or taking diuretic drugs. Mean 24-hour urine NaCl excretion was 162.9 +/- 50.2 gm (range: 100.5-364.0). Mean first-void urine NaCl excretion was 121.7 +/- 49.1 gm (range: 75-280). The percentages of patients with 24-hour urine and first-void urine NaCl excretions above 100, 200, 300, 400, and 500 gm were 3, 67, 81, 83, and 93, respectively. Also the percentages of patients with 24-hour urine and first-void urine NaCl excretions below 100, 200, 300, 400, and 500 gm were 5, 13, 10, 5, and 3, respectively. Our objective is to study the molecular mechanisms involved in the increased peroxidative damage to membrane lipids and the associated cellular dysfunction that occurs in adrenal insufficiency caused by ACTH deficiency. The long-term effects of ACTH on the adrenal cortex and on the rat adrenal cortex Zajdela ascites tumor (ZACT) will be studied. We will pursue evidence that changes in the membrane phospholipids (PL), in cholesterol (Chol) and in the fatty acid composition of the PL occur in rat adrenal cortex. Particular attention will be focused on the potentially injurious effects of the altered lipid composition on membrane-mediated cell function and damage, and on cholesterol biosynthesis. We will determine the importance of the newly synthesized PL in ZACT cell function and survival, and the influence of the newly synthesized PL on cholesterol biosynthesis and on the cholesterol-sterol content of the endoplasmic reticulum. The mechanisms of induction of the enzymes regulating the cholesterol biosynthetic pathway in rat adrenal cortex by ACTH will be investigated. The results will be interpreted in the light of the new findings on possible roles of the PL in determining the metabolism of membrane

N.D.Okl.1986). Here, the same contention was made and was held to be without merit. See In re Marriage of Belanger, 436 N.W.2d at 727. *79 Peter's second argument is that the trial court erred in considering valuation of the mounds of land taken. This is based upon Peter's theory that the value of property taken, or improvements made, has no relevance in cases where the marital estate is being divided. He cites In re Marriage of Larson, 388 N.W.2d 635, 641 (N.D.1986), as authority for this argument. As with his previous contention, this argument has been answered and rejected in other opinions. See Belanger, supra; see also In re Marriage of O'Donnell, 436 N.W.2d 804, 808 (N.D.1989). Furthermore, Peter's argument ignores the fact that in the instant case the trial court in its original order granted both parties the value of the mounds. The trial court later determined that the mounds were marital property, as distinguished from the land itself. Having determined that the mounds were marital property, it is apparent that the trial court properly considered the value of the land. See Belanger, supra. Peter's third argument is that the trial court erred in considering property claimed by Christopher's parents. Peter asserts that Christopher's parents should not have been considered because that property does not fall within the definition of marital property as adopted by this court. We find nothing wrong with considering property claims of other persons when the parties have agreed upon the disposition of their own marital property. See In re Marriage of Johnson, 442 N.W.2d 18, 20 (N.D.1989). Consequently, Peter is not entitled to prevail on this issue. Peter's final contention is that the trial court erred in awarding Christine expenses for her summer and school work. Peter argues that such expenses are not a community obligation of the parties and that, therefore, they are not properly includable in the valuation of the marital estate. The award of these expenses is clearly within the court's discretion, See In re Marriage of Kerl, 386 N.W.2d 210, 212 (N.D.1986), and we find no abuse of discretion in the court's award of these expenses here. The trial court is affirmed. ERICKSTAD, C.J., and LEVINE, J., conc
