Transposable elements in Bacillus subtilis. The insertion sequence, IS5095, and the insertion sequence, IS1302, were detected in a pathogenic strain of Bacillus subtilis. The IS5095 elements are part of a conjugal transposon called Tn916. Both IS5095 and IS1302 are located on the C-terminal end of the gene coding for the 30S ribosomal subunit S11 and are potentially active in the recipient cell. 1. Field of the Invention This invention generally relates to a facsimile apparatus. More specifically, the present invention relates to a facsimile apparatus that can transmit and receive plural sheets of original documents one after another and a control program for the same.

2. Description of the Related Art Recently, facsimile apparatuses have come to perform various operations in addition to the original document transmission/reception function. For example, the facsimile apparatuses may transmit image data of received original documents as a printed matter after receiving the original documents in the form of a hard copy. Further, the facsimile apparatuses have recently developed into multi-functional apparatuses, which can transmit plural original documents at the same time. This is because many companies that have the facsimile apparatuses as their business forms are equipped with a reception function and a transmission function, as necessary. For example, a facsimile apparatus is employed for executing several works of receiving transmitted original documents, transmitting received data as a hard copy, and returning the received data back to the sender. In these electronic machines, a CPU decodes the binary data of the received or transmitted image. Here, the transmission of plural images at the same time is realized by the employment of a coding technique, for example, such as MRC. In this case, however, it is necessary to use a memory of a large capacity for storing the plural images.

FIG. 1 is a block diagram showing the construction of a conventional facsimile apparatus that can transmit and receive original images in plural sheets. In FIG. 1, there is shown a transmission unit 100, a reception unit 200, an operator interface 100a, a display 100b and a transmission microprocessor 101. The transmission unit 100 includes a transmission control unit 102, a decoding unit 103, a transmission line interface 104, a controller
