This is the first time that I've made an RPG/adventure, and I've realized that it's not easy. It's quite challenging, but it also needs a lot of work, so expect bugs and issues. My goal is to make this game better with each iteration so please feel free to give me feedback on this. I would like to warn you to expect a few bugs, and a little bit of lag sometimes. I would also like to thank my friends who have supported this project even before it was finished and who have been helping me with testing and reviewing it. The response I've received has been very encouraging and I'd like to thank you all for taking your time to try my game. I hope you enjoy my work! Shibuya Crossing is a surreal platformer with a dream-like visual style. You take on the role of a high school girl running for a university entrance exam. The school of your dreams is the London Bridge School of design, which is a small, ultra-intelligent school that teaches the latest and most advanced design techniques. Deep within London Bridge, a dream is taking place, and you are part of that dream. It's fun to play, but I thought it might be interesting to compare my earliest design and coding skills against what I'm currently doing, so I decided to redo it with modern coding techniques and graphics.
