Description of the Related Art Aluminum-silicon aluminum-boron, aluminum-boron and aluminum-fluorine are used as raw materials for producing a monocrystalline silicon ingot. Each of these materials can be used as a raw material of a raw material for producing a monocrystalline silicon ingot, provided that the contents of harmful substance which adversely influences crystal growth during the cooling process from the melting temperature to the temperature of a single crystallization are reduced. With respect to these raw materials, ZrO<sub>2</sub> has an effect of significantly reducing the content of the harmful substance, and is used as a raw material for producing a monocrystalline silicon ingot (see JP-A-2004-308569). As a raw material for producing a silica glass ball of the invention, the contents of impurities such as P, As, Sb and Hg are preferably decreased. A method of producing a silica glass ball by utilizing a silica glass frit includes: a chemical process in which a mixture of the above-described raw material and a flux (K<sub>2</sub>O—Na<sub>2</sub>O—Al<sub>2</sub>O<sub>3</sub>—F<sub>2</sub>) is melted in a furnace at a high
