The vast, dangerous World of TERA is constantly in motion, and you will need to take fate in your own hands to survive. As you explore and fight your way through the mysterious World of TERA, you will make friends, enemies, and alliances. Your actions will impact the outcome of the universe, and change how the world will remember you. Fight your way through the arid wastelands of Tera, hidden ruins of forgotten gods, and bustling cities infested with monsters to uncover the truth behind the destructive force known as the Coven and the rise of the Pirate King. Key Features of TERA True Action Combat - Tired of the norm? TERA upsets the traditional MMORPG formula with its dynamic, true action combat that turns the massively multiplayer genre on its head. True action takes place out in the field, and players can choose from four major combat styles and countless potential combinations of them. Battle skills - Use battle skills to complement your class specialization to unleash a devastating combination of physical or magical attacks. Weave in combat-oriented spells to devastate your foes or protect your allies from harm, using a variety of abilities to strategically outwit the enemy and turn the tide of battle in your favor. Guild-based system - Forming a guild in TERA can help you make friends, bolster your social status, and get invitations to special events where you can get even more power. A dynamic guild system based on active guilds, inactive guilds, and special guilds, the system keeps the game interesting and balanced for all skill levels. Dark Elves of Tera - The dark elven people of Tera are known as graceful, magical beings, and they act like they are. A proud race that excels in the usage of magical abilities and spells, they also have a distinct tendency to be innovative and stubborn. When you take on the role of a dark elf, you feel confident that you can outthink your foes and overcome their powerful attacks. Steampunk World of TERA - Tera is an open-ended game world in which the environment and the overall feel can be modified to suit the needs of the players. Pesek William Pesek, a resident of Clarkston, Wash. and a lead reporter for West Coast Sports Fans, is GoDuke.com's beat writer for the Blue Devils' basketball team. Read his content on a daily basis via Facebook and on Twitter @WilliamPesek. When it comes to the All-Star Game on Feb. 17, two things may easily be pointed to on Duke's roster. Duke's bench is deep. It's the deepest team the Blue Devils have fielded since the 1987 team led by Christian Laettner, Mike Krzyzewski, Grant Hill and Eric Montross, and it should lead to wins. Point guards Corey Maggette and Danny Green, wings LeBron James and Paul Pierce and power forward James Posey, are all more than capable of winning a game. While Duke finds itself in the All-Star Game for the first time since the 1978 team Chris Evert, Evonne Goolagong and Nancy Lieberman, the problem is the amount of voters that have been favoring certain players. I'm not just talking about James, the NBA's leading scorer, the only frontcourt player selected for the Eastern Conference team. People have also been voting in Paul Pierce, the 2008 NBA Finals MVP and the best shooting guard in the league. Coach Mike Krzyzewski, however, is on a losing streak when it comes to the voting. He's been involved in four of the last seven All-Star Games, winning in 2008 in the same year as LeBron. For all the talk of how much more of a national stage Kentucky has received since John Calipari took over at the school, I'll put more faith in the current Duke roster than the Wildcats'. Still, fans shouldn't be surprised when Duke has struggles in the All-Star Game. Last year's No. 1-seeded Duke team played at a level closer to that of No. 2 Indiana than it did the 1989 Final Four team. Team chemistry is a factor. I know Scottie Reynolds rarely talks to the media, but he came out and said it: This year's team doesn't seem to be clicking as well as last year's team. While this team will struggle at times, it does have talent, and my guess is it'll be better than the one that lost to Kentucky last year. Having time to build things up before the postseason begins should help.
