So, for example, the following returns in its entirety: return jsonify(query) However, I want to execute multiple queries and have some filtering on the output of those queries. How do I go about this? Suppose I had the following queries: query_one = db.execute("SELECT * FROM (SELECT * FROM students) WHERE student_id = 4") query_two = db.execute("SELECT * FROM (SELECT * FROM students) WHERE student_id = 5") How would I get only the first one? A: You can also do it using with statement: with db.cursor() as cur: cur.execute("""" SELECT * FROM (SELECT * FROM students) WHERE student_id = 4 """") result_1 = cur.fetchall() # result is a list of tuples # you may also do this way if you are only interested in first query result: # result_1 = cur.fetchall()[0] If you want to do some filters based on the result, you have to do on it to see if you need to handle it. A: As others have noted, you can use the with statement to loop over the results of the query. You can then use the fetchall() method to access each row in turn. Here's an example: from flask import Flask, jsonify # create some test data Student = ['1', '2', '3', '4', '5', '6'] students = [Student for _ in range(6)] #... do something with your data... app = Flask(__name__) def get_first_query_results(): with app.app_context(): cur = db.cursor()
