Features Key:

A Unique New Thrilling Crime Story

If there is one thing we try to do at Covertly.io, it's tell compelling stories based around intriguing and complex criminal activity. How do you proceed when faced with the aftermath of an investigation?

At some point, you will be faced with a complex situation or an inability to see what your next move is, what your next move is, at some point, you will need to work with everyone you can to achieve justice. And we set up a game to reflect this, based around our real criminal cases.

Multi Player - Tons of Modes

Want to play an investigation together?
Need to resolve the relative roles in a case?

In this game, you are able to set up a whole ton of different missions, which can be performed in any order, letting you define your own hierarchy and conflict resolution procedure. If you want to solve all the missions, there's nothing stopping you. You can either bypass the other plays and solve the case yourself, or you can bring them into the scenario and work together as a group.

A Unique Set of Officers

We got nothing against traditional investigations, but sometimes we just want to go to the next level. So in this game, we wanted to create the opportunity to procedurally generate a complete investigation team. Your choices really make these teams personal, and unique.

Purchase/Option one: -Plushy Daughter Pat -$9.99 (Plays for 10-15 minutes) -$25.99 (Plays for 25-30 minutes) -$49.99 (Plays for 35-40 minutes) -$99.99 (Plays for 50+ minutes) Purchase/Option two: -Chicken Face Pat (with another "Head accessory" goes on inside) -$10.00 (Plays for 10-15 minutes) -$20.00 (Plays for 20-30 minutes) -$40.00 (Plays for 40-50 minutes) -$80.00 (Plays for 60-80 minutes) Purchase/Option three: -Perfect Pat (with another "Head accessory" goes on inside) -$10.00 (Plays for 10-15 minutes) -$20.00 (Plays for 20-30 minutes) -$40.00 (Plays for 40-50 minutes) -$80.00 (Plays for 60-80 minutes) In all of these options, you will need to purchase the accessory before you purchase the plush. You will need to add a doll or "mother" to the plush to move it through her little animation, then when she's done, she will be removed. BUT you can hold onto her until her job is done then you can take her to the "blouse room" and pull out another part of her and put on a different accessory. She will "unzip" her shirt and wear what's inside it. So, put the mother in the pocket of her blouse. Then, when she's done playing for that one, you can then take her to the blouse room and pick out a part with a different accessory and put it on her. So, after a while you could have a costume. For most of the characters, a mother is required for each new part so you can keep the set moving through its animation. So, it's best to have a mother already stored. (Writing as R. Skylark) I write this one from the point of view of my character Marina Duncan of the Forsaken. As with all stories written from her point of view I work on the assumption that the reader will not make the mistakes myself. If you don't think I know what I'm talking about then just read the stories of other characters you may have read about and you should be fine. How not to run your campaigns To me a good game should be interesting. I know that's a pretty big statement but I've been in enough poorly run games as a GM that I think I can say for certain that no game is interesting if it doesn't have a chance to be interesting. In other words a game just hasn't been run properly if it does not allow the players the opportunity to do things which will make the game interesting to them and you. Which doesn't mean that you should let them get away with murder (or let's face it, whatever kind of murder they like) but the way they treat the characters and the way they try to play the game in order to win out over a rival party or play a mind game with you is going to make the game just not an interesting one to you either unless you are the bad guy the whole time or you are really really good at giving them a time-out. Why this is important Because it is good fun to play a game which you actually enjoy with people you actually like and who enjoy both the game and the company of you. You want to have fun in your group and when you see your friends you want to spend time with them and enjoy their company. Much as I love people I don't really want to spend time talking to people if they generally make me feel bad about my PC because I have a lot of admiration for them and it would make me sad if they weren't perfect. Am I saying that we have to play the game in the correct way then? No, not at all. Let's play the game Even though the game is based on Pirates we're going to be playing on land and sea instead and that will slow the game down greatly especially if you have one or two people in the group who have a strong preference for sea play which means you should think about it whether or not you want that kind of play in the game. You might have PCs who are more good with fighting in close combat and other play but you might have PCs who

Life Educated at the Sheffield Scientific School of Harvard University and at Howard University in Washington, D.C., Fossey was a rare one among African-Americans at Harvard in the early 20th century: An essayist and reviewer, he was influenced by Arnold Bennett, Gertrude Stein and the Impressionists, and in his work displayed the influence of early Modernism. He wrote articles for such literary magazines as The Bookman, The Bookman Review, Kenyon Review, and the Atlantic Monthly. In 1925 Fossey took a position at the University of Iowa, where he worked for a time as a librarian. He moved to New York City in 1926 and published three volumes of essays: He joined The Nation in 1928 and contributed to it sporadically for the next thirteen years. He also contributed to the Atlantic Monthly and The Nation (1928–1932); the Saturday Review of Literature (1932–1939) and the New Republic (1929–1940). He collaborated with Theodore Dreiser on the latter's Modernism in Fiction (1932) and wrote the libretto to Dreiser's 1932 opera An American Tragedy. In 1929 Fossey joined the faculty of the University of Connecticut as a visiting professor. He resigned from the university in 1932 and worked as a freelance writer for the next three decades, becoming a prolific biographer. Fossey also wrote non-fiction books about Italian Renaissance artists and about the history of Atlanta, Georgia. John Louis Fossey died in Waltham, Massachusetts, in 1965.
