medical database for healthcare .Q: The structure of DFS, BFS My problem is I want to look through all the edges of a graph G to see if there are any cycles of them. The structure for DFS(depth first search), is at the beginning it will stop at the root vertex of the graph and go through all the edges that are connected to it. The structure for BFS(breadth first search), is at the beginning it will stop at each vertices and choose the first available one to go through. My problem is I want to see how does BFS order all the vertices of a graph. By selecting at each vertex which vertex comes first in the order, for example all the edges of the root are 1, then I choose another vertex to put 1 and so on. So the order would be 1,2,3,...,n. And now the root would be located in the first n positions. But it isn't working. Here is the DFS code: int Depth(struct List Node) { int n = 0; List current = Node; while (current!= NULL) { current = current->next; n++; } return n; } int DFS(struct List *node, int n) { int value = 0; struct List current = *node; *node = NULL; while (n > 0) { value = Depth(current); current = current->next;
