Lottery Assistant PC/Windows [Latest 2022]

The Lottery Assistant is a tool designed to help you pick winning lottery number combinations. The software can simulate different lottery configurations and offer a full wheel for guaranteed winners. The software allows you to enter data for any lottery using an Excel spreadsheet format. Statistical data, as well as the number of times a number combination has been drawn, is also displayed. An example of a lottery that is supported is the South African lottery. The predictive section of the software works on a complex algorithm to predict the next winning number combinations. The software tries to predict all winning combinations from the statistical data, and stores only the most likely combinations. The software displays the odds of a winning combination to be drawn. An example is the odds of drawing the winning number combination using the wheel. The software displays a frequency graph of the number combinations, showing how many times a number combination has been drawn during the last history. Lottery Assistant is highly flexible, and can be configured for virtually any lottery system. You can also use the software for multiple lotteries, and you can use a full wheel to generate thousands of combinations for your lottery. In the software, the "Suggest" feature allows you to automatically generate number combinations based on statistical data generated from previous draws of your lottery. You can select from an X-ray of your winning numbers (if available), print directly onto your lottery tickets and save hours by printing the combinations. In the "Help" menu, you can find a lot of useful information on the software and how to use it. Lottery Assistant (formerly Fastloto) is a program designed to help you pick winning lottery numbers. It takes care of the hard work for you by matching various parameters of the lottery (which numbers to pick) against the statistical distribution of previous lottery draws. It includes a complete set of wheels for the South African, UK and New Zealand national lotteries, with the addition of all South African 'Block' lotteries. This software provides a high probability guarantee for winning any particular lottery. Basically, it is made up of two parts - "Where do I find the numbers?" and "How many times?" From these two questions, the software uses complex algorithms to help you pick winning combinations. When it comes to "Where do I find the numbers?" it uses the information generated from historical data to generate a suggestion list based on the same probability of selection for the player. Its' main purpose is to help you find a more likely option for your lottery draw, by matching your parameters (the numbers selected) against the historical statistical distribution of previous draws. Lottery Assistant is flexible and can be configured for virtually any lottery system. You can change the number of tickets, the number of combinations for each draw, the number of previous draws, the source of the draws (it has a built-in data reader for any system, including manual submissions), the number of results to print, and the location of where the results are to be printed. Lottery Assistant Statistics: The "Wheel" includes several useful statistics: * The selection frequency, the number of times the selected numbers have been selected in the past. * You can set a frequency percentage below which a number will be excluded from the wheel. * You can set a percentage below which a number will be included in the wheel, and set a frequency for an alternate option. * You can set a previous draw number that all options based on this number will have the same frequency. This is helpful if you are running a 'Random' wheel and you want to guarantee that a number will always be selected. * You can select just the winning combinations for each draw, or you can select all combinations, and the winning combinations will be shown on the wheel. * You can set the wheel to print just all the selected results, or all the selected results and the winner(s). Lottery Assistant Simulator: As well as allowing you to specify the maximum number of results to be printed (depending on the number of b7e8fdf5c8
