The study of mitochondrial DNA (mtDNA) haplotype polymorphism and genetic structure of the Altai population as well as the influence of geographic and ethnic factors on the pattern of the mtDNA genetic structure was carried out.

The samples of human mtDNA were obtained from residents of the Altai region. The haplotype composition of the Altai population was found to be very close to the haplotype composition of the indigenous people of Siberia and to correspond to the European haplotype set. This similarity can be interpreted as an evidence of the common origin of the indigenous peoples of Siberia and the Altai region. The frequency of the haplotypes of the origin of the Altai region (haplotype set F1) was lower by about one half than the frequency of the haplotype set of indigenous people of Siberia and the Far East (haplotype set F2). This evidence can be interpreted as evidence of genetic input of the European genes to the Altai population.
