The present invention relates to a multi-purpose utility knife, and more particularly, to a utility knife which provides a selection of functions and which includes a switch system for selecting the functions which are to be performed. There are a number of utility knives known in the art. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 5,558,531 to Rowe discloses a utility knife which includes an elongated handle which is configured to facilitate the cutting of a plurality of types of materials, including nails, bolts, drywall screws, screws, metal rods, and the like. The utility knife is formed to have a sharpened blade which is positioned on a slide and which is positioned to project outwardly from the handle when the knife is in an open configuration. The knife includes a foot pedal which is disposed within the handle such that the foot pedal is disposed in a generally aligned position with the slide. The foot pedal is manipulated by the user to displace the blade along the slide so as to expose the blade for the cutting of a piece of material. The foot pedal is then depressed such that the blade is retracted within the handle so as to close the knife. U.S. Pat. No. 5,979,855 to Komoda, et al. also discloses a utility knife which provides for the adjustment of the position of the blade relative to the handle, and which permits the tip of the blade to be adjusted relative to the user. The knife includes a blade which is mounted for displacement along a slide which in turn is mounted within the handle. The slide is mounted for rotation about an axis and a cam arrangement is provided for raising and lowering the blade with respect to the handle, as well as for raising and lowering the blade relative to the user. U.S. Pat. No. 6,039,004 to Elgin, et al. discloses a utility knife which includes a handle having a switch that is disposed within the handle and which is coupled to a slide which in turn is coupled to a blade. The switch is operable by the user to vary the direction of a surface of the blade. The blade is supported in a range of positions, and may be rotated to the desired position. The handle includes a finger guard which is selectively coupled to the handle. U.S. Pat. No. 6,422,962 to Woo teaches
