* Color mode : Color, grayscale, or monochrome. Color mode allows you to see color as well as grayscale, which means it's using only black and white, or grayscale. * Luminosity : The way the camera converts the original colors into grayscale. Luminosity is useful if your images may have strong color casts (tints and/or shades that are too light or too dark). * Tone curve : This tool allows you to apply color variations to the image in order to correct poor color tones. * Adjust layers : A special layer that allows you to make adjustments to the entire image at once. * Layer masking : A special layer that allows you to mask parts of the image. When you apply a layer mask to a layer, you can see its effects, as well as the areas of the layer that are masked. * Shading : This tool allows you to apply a highlight layer that creates a brighter picture with highlights and shadows.

New integrated antimicrobial cover on a one-day basis. The take-up of Intranase Gel was evaluated in a pilot study on 567 infants in 2 centres over a one-month period. In centre A, 341 infants were treated with one application of Intranase Gel and 238 with three applications, while in centre B, 226 infants were treated with two applications. Sore throat and pharyngitis occurred in 13 (3.4 per cent) and 16 (5.7 per cent) infants, respectively. The pharyngitis occurred one to two days after treatment in all infants. No other adverse effects were reported. A positive bacteriological culture was obtained in 114 of the patients treated with one application, and in 48 of the patients treated with three applications. If the treated patients and untreated controls were compared with matched pairs analysis showed a lower rate of bacterial infection among those treated with three applications of Intranase Gel (p [unreadable] [unreadable])
