Spin-crossover with catalytic water decomposition: characterization and application. A spin-crossover (SCO) complex, [Ni(1,10-phenanthroline)NbS(CN)(2)]NO(3) (1), shows SCO behavior and an excellent catalytic activity of water decomposition. The reaction of 1 with water at 0.5 M was measured by UV-vis spectroscopy and stopped by freeze-quench method. The resulting spin switch and its catalytic reaction were characterized by X-ray structural analysis, magnetic susceptibility, and UV-vis spectroscopy. New options for the treatment of labial scarring and contraction. The treatment of labial scars and contractures continues to be a challenge for the facial plastic and reconstructive surgeon, often requiring multiple operative procedures and several months of healing. Although patients are often given the impression that reconstructive surgery will not be successful, the surgeon should not abandon an effort toward a positive outcome. Herein, the authors present a broad overview of the current reconstructive approaches to the treatment of labial scarring and contractures. The authors acknowledge that further research on selected and novel approaches to plastic and reconstructive surgery are needed. its also not terribly useful either if you actually want to predict problems with intercity travel in the future. For example, the summer is
