They are a fantastic way to generate unique topic ideas, or simply because you can read through what other people have written. Also, unlike a random generator, the results are not limited by the number of results. These will all be returned when the generator is run. Data points to consider: - This version is not full proof. In other words, if the selection and generator is returned for use more than once, the quotes will be the same each time. The first run will be based on the data saved at that time. - Currently there is a selectable minimum value. Quotes above the specified value will be set to that value. - The CSV format for quotes is a bit different than other quotes applications. - The quotes are separated by lines, with two spaces separating the quote and the author's name. The author can be entered manually or selected via a drop down. The quote can be selected from a variety of fields, including auto-complete, line-by-line, and topic. - A drop down menu allows for quotes to be assigned to a topic, and this can be set via the topic selection page. - An online text editor is provided. You may manually edit a quote and save it as part of the generation process.
