Dahlia Farms is a unique interactive Hidden Object Adventure mixed with 3 different mini-games. Travel to the idyllic farmland of Dahlia Farms where you'll meet a host of quirky characters and solve a variety of Hidden Object Puzzle games, but most importantly help Floyd save the farm. Will you be the Farmer of the Year? Features: Hidden object objects will change depending on where you are in the farm Adventurous storyline brimming with drama and secrets! Music by Aaronyen Welcome to the lovely and peaceful town of Frampton Beach. Take a stroll through the town's lovely, but slightly worn, paved streets. See the lovely, but rather aging, Victorian homes of the well-to-do residents of the town. Take some photos, maybe stop for some snacks, and then go back to town for more. - Walk around Frampton Beach - Cute scents - Gentle elements - Steep learning curve - Funny characters -...perhaps even a fairy tale Everything is bigger in Frampton Beach, and it's getting bigger now with your help! Build or buy lots of adorable real estate. Build a train depot if you want to make the town all rail-y. Or maybe a sports stadium if you and your town can afford it? Sprinkle your money across the town. And of course you can also build a castle, which will make the town all castle-y. This game requires a decent processor. Expect to see fps of up to ~16FPS, on average. It runs on PS Vita, but is more meant for home use. You can vote on the roadmap, and always chat with fellow players. This has been two years in the making, and now it's time to spend your holidays in Frampton Beach. Note: We had a good laugh at the diner and now we have a special offer for anyone that purchases this game. What's new in Farmington Tales:

written by 101 STRANGERS IN A GROCERY STORE As soon as the first people started filing into the Grove Foodland on the Northern White Plains Road in Hopewell Junction, a feeling of nervous anticipation settled over the small but crowded line of shoppers. An inside look at the store showed that the elaborate and colorful displays were enticing, as were the posters on the walls telling about the special foods, but the floor display was almost overwhelming and the pictures on the wall gave the illusion of a megastore, not a multiple market. Everyone in the line appeared awed by the novelty of the foodstore, though not one person I talked with who had visited more than once during the first week. June and I skipped the first trip to the supermarket to watch both of her young cousins—Jill, age 5, and Joey, age 3. One friendly greeting at the cash register and we passed by them, our sweet uniformed high school junior escort. As we made our purchases and waited for the trailers to deposit our groceries, the store filled with people waiting for their purchases. We rarely go to the supermarket now, until we need to replenish the three-day supply of food in our cupboards or reach for a pound of bacon (I know it sounds crazy, but fresh food isn't as cheap as it used to be) in the pharmacy or the drugstore. However, we have friends who have made an exception for a special occasion—the first college party or exam, the Easter holiday with friends, or perhaps a big family picnic. Norman Griffin, self-proclaimed "professional shopper" who seemed to know everyone in the store, couldn't keep his eyes from popping with delight as we passed through the entrance. The two bags tied with purple boas to our arms weighed more than a heavy teenager on his first day at summer camp. The extra grocery bags would be quickly organized by the husband, long before he'd ever become proficient at the work. June's two little cousins looked on and tried to understand as we loaded the car, but there were some things that were simply too big for children to comprehend. I have no difficulty comprehending that there is one food that is bigger than my stomach, but some kids don't seem to grasp the concept of containers that hold unknown food—like the bags of popcorn. As we began our trip to the house, I looked down at Joey, age 3, who was clutching the grocery bag
