Berlin (AFP) - German police arrested more than 100 migrants and made dozens of other people flee a refugee shelter when a fire broke out there, local officials said on Saturday. The fire at the shelter in the northern city of Oldenburg was put out quickly, but police arrested 92 refugees and at least four suspected arsonists, in addition to confiscating a number of flammable objects, authorities said. "Without claiming that the fire was started deliberately, we suspect arson," police spokesperson Juliane Schwarz-Drucker told AFP. The fire broke out in the shelter shortly after noon (1000 GMT) and immediately came under suspicion. Witnesses saw suspicious packages thrown into a courtyard outside the shelter, which has capacity for 140 people, Schwarz-Drucker said. An officer saw smoke coming from the centre, broke through its doors and found fire. A migrant had been badly burned in the blaze, but the other refugees had all been safely taken outside, she added.
