The sensitivity of artery, vein and aorta to constrictor action of four vasoconstrictor substances was studied. Vasoconstrictors used were phenylephrine, norepinephrine, angiotensin II and endothelin. Vasoconstrictor responses were obtained from an artery, a vein and a thoracic aorta in rats. Phenylephrine induced the contraction of a rat femoral artery, an isolated rat femoral vein and rat aorta. The responses of the artery were significantly greater than those of the vein or aorta. Endothelin showed a potent contractile response in all vessels. Norepinephrine did not cause contraction in any vessel studied. Angiotensin II caused a marked contraction only in the aorta.Tourism in Lithuania Tourism in Lithuania is a booming industry in the country. I made friends, found myself, got married, and tried to give my life to Jesus. When that didn't work, I moved back to my hometown, started another church, and began to work as the pastor. That next couple of years were great, so that seemed like a good plan. I began to notice that I wasn't myself anymore—mostly because I missed speaking, and that whole ministry-thing turned me off. 6d1f23a050
