So i had to downgrade the version by following this question below because my google play services version was 9.0.1 but the returned error was 9.0.0. My issue is that my google play services version is now 9.0.0 but everytime i start the app, google play services download from 9.0.1. Any way i could get my app to work now? A: It sounds like you've downloaded the "new" Google Play services package from the Play Store that's built against Android 8.1. When you flash your device to Oreo, you're also updating your build.gradle file. This is causing the problem. You can either: Install the "old" Google Play services package (as you mentioned) Keep the latest package from the Play Store More information on Oreo-compatible packages: More information on updating to Oreo: Q: "Segmentation Fault (core dumped)" in C, but not with printf() I can't understand why this gives a segmentation fault: int c; c=1+1; printf("%d", c); if i use it instead of printf, like in this little program: int main() { int c; c=1+1; printf("%d", c); return 0; } it works fine, but if i use the printf as above i get this error: Segmentation fault (core dumped) I didn't expect this to make any difference, but then, why does it work when i use printf, but not with an assignment?
