Release in the United Kingdom in 1992 at the same time. Preceded by: LessNews Rudy Giuliani's remarks this weekend about Arlen Specter -- that the Pennsylvania senator's political career is "dead" because of his vote for President Obama's health care reform bill -- are not, in fact, helpful to his boss's political prospects. When Rudy Giuliani wanted to read his statement as part of his Obama health care reform lobbying efforts, he picked a story about how some people like their Medicare programs the way they are. In the debate over health care reform in the United States, there are many voices, but only one Rudy Giuliani. And, when it comes to health care and its impact on the “problem” of growing costs and shrinking access for the American people, there is no debate — he's got his own thing going for him. In Chicago, Dr. Harold Bornstein, Donald Trump's personal physician and personal doctor to others, wrote a prescription for the Republican presidential candidate's political health. And Rudy Giuliani is intent on getting that prescription filled. Former New York City Mayor Giuliani issued a strongly-worded statement this morning disputing the claim that he made $300,000 consulting for Arlen Specter's campaign, on the basis that his contract with Specter included no specific dollar figure. For some reason, ever since Rudy Giuliani's comments on Michael Jackson's use of a HIV-tainted blood product didn't quite go over as well as he hoped, the former mayor has been unusually quiet lately about the bizarre trial of the pop star's dentist.

After a couple of days of ramping up his attack on Michael Jackson, in which Giuliani called the entertainer a pedophile, American's pastor Billy Graham asked the former Mayor to stop.

Here's Giuliani's statement from today about Michael Jackson: How many lawyers does it take to change a light bulb? At least three.

This is what TV tells me. (1) Barbara Walters just told me that Billy Graham believes Michael Jackson is a pedophile. (2) That's "our story," says

Walters. ("Our story" is the c6a93da74d
